

A computer is an electronic device that can store, process, and communicate information. It is an essential tool in today's world, used in various aspects of life, from simple tasks like browsing the internet to complex operations like space exploration.